Description of remains, precise location and stratification (attach plans if necessary)

This field had been ploughed and harrowed prior to sowing and was in a good condition for walking.

The drift geology is 'Red Marl'.

The field is bounded on the west by the 'Old piece' field (which contains the earthworks which the Newbold group surveyed during 1980), to the east is a modern housing estate which is built on what was formerly church land and to the north is the Hall Farm and moated site complex. To the south is Marshall Spinney and a sewerage works.

Conclusions

The normal scatter of pottery associated with the manuring of fields.
